This major work covers all the aspects of the human adventure on Earth with rigor and completeness: from historical events through the centuries to achievements in the arts and literature; the fundamental legacy of different civilizations in urban life and architecture is explored, as well as the development of scientific and technical research: a fundamental link for an understanding of the progress of humankind. The volume on the religions of the world describes how faith has been a force in society from the origins of humanity to the present; the series concludes with a volume on all sports, with their history, rules, champions and major competitions. The clear subdivisions in sections and chapters, attractive, legible graphics and fine illustrations make this encyclopedia an immediately useful work, for absorbing reading, page after page. A true reference tool for families, perfect for research projects and point-by-point consultation, this series provides an indispensable instrument for knowledge of our past, helping young people, but also their parents, to make surprising discoveries about the facts, situations and developments that have shaped our world as it is today.
